Ye thought evil against me, but God meant it unto good. (Genesis 50:20)

Joseph's brothers spoke of killing him, but instead they sold him as a slave, and told their father a wild animal had killed him. Many years later, when they met Joseph again, he was neither angry nor bitter with them, especially when he learned how sorry they were for what they had done. He knew God had sent him to Egypt to collect the grain that would save many lives, including his brothers and his father.

Genesis 45:5
